

Towards High Throughput, Deep, Wide-Field Multiphoton Microscopy

Peter T. C. So

Dept. of Mechanical and Biological Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

While wide-field multiphoton microscopy based on temporal focusing has been developed for over a decade. This approach has been limited by having modest penetration in tissues due to scattering. We will explore several approaches to overcome this limitation including three-photon excitation, coupling structured illumination with computation image recovery, and volumetric whole volume reconstruction.